

CONTRIBUTORS

Adil Johan is an ethnomusicologist and saxophonist who is currently a Research Fellow at the Institute of Ethnic Studies, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia. Upon being awarded his PhD from King's College London, he wrote the book Cosmopolitan Intimacies, published with NUS Press, that examines the film music of 1950s and 1960s Malay films in the context of postcolonial nation-making. His current research focusses on issues of ethnicity, gender, and intercultural intimacies expressed in the production, consumption and performances of popular music artistes and groups in the Malay world.

Aisah Hossin is an independent researcher and holds a Bachelor of Social Science with honours (Sociology and Social Anthropology) and Master of Arts (MA) from the Universiti Malaysia Sabah. Her research interests include seaweed cultivation, community development studies and poverty studies.

Che Mohd Aziz Yaacob is a senior lecturer at the School of International Studies, Universiti Utara Malaysia (UUM). He holds a PhD from Universiti Sains Malaysia in Conflict and Peace Studies. His research interest focuses on community peace and capacity building.

Emily Lau Kui-Ling is a senior lecturer with the Department of English Language, Faculty of Languages and Linguistics, University of Malaya (UM). She obtained her PhD, Master of Arts (MA) and Bachelor of Arts (BA) from the UM. Her research interests revolve around interdisciplinary studies with special interest in advertising and gender, in particular, research into body images.

Farahah Rosni is a Psychology graduate from the Faculty of Social Sciences and Humanities, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia.

Hajar Abdul Rahim is a Professor of Linguistics at the English Language Studies department, School of Humanities, Universiti Sains Malaysia.

Hew Wai Weng is a fellow at the Institute of Malaysian and International Studies, the National University of Malaysia. He has published on Chinese Muslim identities, Hui migration, and urban middle-class Muslim aspirations in Malaysia and Indonesia. He is the author of Chinese Ways of Being Muslim: Negotiating Ethnicity and Religiosity in Indonesia (NIAS Press, 2018).

Kamarulnizam Abdullah is Professor at the School of International Studies, Universiti Utara Malaysia. He received his PhD from Lancaster University, UK. His research focuses on terrorism, political violence and religious militancy, and border security.

Loo, Hong Chuang, PhD is the deputy dean of the Faculty of Creative Industries at Universiti Tunku Abdul Rahman. Trained in media and cultural studies, he teaches subjects related to the media and continues to research the role various media play in transforming and maintaining the intertwining relationships between ethnicity and nationalism in multi-ethnic societies. He is currently working on research and film projects related to the dynamics of heritage and tourism on ethnic minorities in Malaysia.

Mohammad Rahim Kamaluddin completed his doctoral degree (Criminology) in Universiti Sains Malaysia, Health Campus in 2015 and is currently working as a senior lecturer at the Human and Societal Well-Being Centre, Faculty of Social Sciences and Humanities, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia. His research interests include criminology, criminal psychology, forensic criminology, murder, violence, crime prevention, victimology, as well as profiling and psychometrics.

Mohd Shazwan Mokhtar is a lecturer at the History Programme, Faculty of Social Science and Humanities, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia (UKM). He is currently a PhD candidate and holds a M.Phil and B.A. Hons [Distinction] from UKM. He won the Malaysian Historical Society's Gold Medal in 2014 and 3rd Place in 2018 Malaysian Historical Society's Essay Competition. His research interests are British imperial and colonial economic history, global history (neo-mercantilism & trade) and Malaysian history.

Mohd Sofian Omar Fauzee is Professor at the School of Education and Modern Languages, Universiti Utara Malaysia. He holds a PhD from the Leeds Metropolitan University, UK. His research focuses on research education and social psychology.

Ong Puay Liu, PhD, a retired Professor (Anthropology of Development) and Principal Research Fellow with the Institute of Ethnic Studies, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia. Received her PhD in Sociology (2000) from University of Edinburgh. Her research interests include ethnic and cultural studies, community development and border studies, inclusive education and social cohesion, dyslexia and early intervention; governance for heritage conservation and documentation of cultural heritage (Melaka and Langkawi) and Peranakan communities in Kelantan and Terengganu. She has organised English and bahasa Melayu literacy camps for Orang Asli Temuan children in Selangor on behalf of the Dyslexia Association of Sarawak.

Ong Cheng Teik is a senior lecturer at the School of Education, Languages and Communications, Wawasan Open University, Pulau Pinang, Malaysia. He holds an MA in Linguistics and English Language Studies from Universiti Sains Malaysia and a B.Ed. (TESL) from Universiti Malaya. His research interests include code-switching, blended learning and open distance learning. He is also interested in critical discourse analysis of media texts, particularly on terrorism and the Goods and Services Tax (GST).

Pue, Giok Hun, PhD, is Research Fellow at the Institute of Ethnic Studies, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia. Her areas of interest are ethnic identity formation and negotiation among minority ethnic groups within the mixed-race and Peranakan phenomena in Malaysia with particular focus on the Peranakan Chinese communities in Kelantan and Terengganu. Dr. Pue's latest publications include Cina Peranakan Kelantan Menerusi Lensa Sosiologi (Kelantan Peranakan Chinese Through Sociological Lens, 2018) and Kelantan Peranakan Chinese Language and Marker of Group Identity (2019).

Rosazman Hussin is Professor in the Faculty of Humanities, Arts and Heritage at Universiti Malaysia Sabah (UMS). Currently, he is serving as Director of Borneo Institute for Indigenous Studies (BORIIS), UMS. Professor Dr. Rosazman has been involved in ecotourism and community development research in Sabah since 1998. The main research area focus is the lower Kinabatangan area of Sabah specifically Sukau and Batu Puteh village. In the lower Kinabatangan area, he is investigating the impact of ecotourism development on local community; poverty and community participation in homestay programmes; local community, seaweed cultivation and community development, partners for wetland and conservation. He has published academic books and proceedings, journal articles nationally and internationally.

Shazlin A. Hamzah is a research fellow at the Institute of Ethnic Studies, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia. She holds a PhD from the same university and a Master of Arts (MA) in Communications from Universiti Teknologi MARA. Her research interests include popular music and its relation to the construction of national identity, nations and nationalism within the field of ethnic studies. She also focuses on nation branding, paying close attention to ethnosymbolism and its effect on national image.

Wan, Chang Da is the Deputy Director and a senior lecturer at the National Higher Education Research Institute, Universiti Sains Malaysia. He earned his doctorate from the University of Oxford in the field of higher education and was trained as an economist at the University of Malaya and National University of Singapore. His main research interest is higher education policy and internationalisation of higher education, particularly in the Global South.

Wan Shahrazad Wan Sulaiman is an Associate Professor at the Human and Societal Well-Being Centre, Faculty of Social Sciences and Humanities, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia. She completed her doctoral degree (Psychology) at Universiti Islam Antarabangsa Malaysia. Her research interests include psychological measurements and testing, industrial and organisational psychology as well as crime prevention.

Wong Ngan Ling is a senior lecturer with the Department of Asian and European Languages, Faculty of Languages and Linguistics, University of Malaya. She obtained her PhD and Master of Arts (MA) from the University of Nagoya, Japan and Bachelor of Arts (BA) from Tsukuba University of Japan. Her research interests revolve around intercultural communication studies, sociolinguistics, silence communication with special interest in Japanese language and culture learning and student mobility.

Velan Kunjuraman is currently affiliated with Universiti Malaysia Kelantan as a tourism lecturer and serving as a research coordinator at faculty level. He holds a Bachelor of Social Science with honours (Sociology and Social Anthropology) and Master of Arts (MA) specifically on tourism planning and community development from the Universiti Malaysia Sabah (UMS). On the other hand, he is also a doctoral researcher in the Borneo Institute for Indigenous Studies (BORIIS), UMS and is currently working on his PhD thesis on the ecotourism in Lower Kinabatangan area of Sabah, Malaysia. His research interests are in Sociology of Ecotourism and Community Development, seaweed cultivation and homestay programmes, community-based ecotourism, tourism planning, and tourism impacts.